

Environmental and Natural Resources Law for International Lawyers Summer Institute at Lewis and Clark Law School

The Environmental and Natural Resources Law for International Lawyers Summer Institute at Lewis and Clark Law School offers an opportunity for international lawyers to develop an understanding of the U.S. legal system, U.S. law practice and firms, and important environmental and natural resources legal issues while studying at one of the premier programs in the United States. In addition to rigorous academics and immersion on a U.S. law campus, participants will have an opportunity to meet and network with prominent law firms and businesses. Options include:

- Intensive three-day introductory course in U.S. legal systems and studies.
- Choice of four credits of environmental and natural resources courses.

- Two weeks in residence with leading Portland law firms learning about cross border business litigation and transactions as well as environmental and natural resources issues.
- Participation in law firm team meetings; exposure to how U.S. law firms deliver services to U.S. clients.
- Opportunities to meet local business owners and multi-national clients.
- Possible visits to Seattle, Washington law firm offices.
- Visits with federal and state judges and opportunities to observe court proceedings.

Lewis and Clark Law School

Lewis and Clark's Environmental and Natural Resources Law Program, established in 1970, was the first environmental law program in the United States, and is recognized as one of the best of its kind in the nation. The program was launched with the publication of the first environmental law review in the country, Environmental Law, which is widely recognized as the foremost environmental law journal in the United States.

Our environmental and natural resources law program offers education in all aspects of environmental and natural resources law, including the laws of the United States, international law, and related areas such as environmental justice and animal law. We offer J.D., Master of Law, and Master of Studies programs with over fifty courses and world class faculty. We provide the most extensive year-round environmental and natural resources curriculum in the United States.

In addition to welcoming international students, Lewis and Clark's environmental law program regularly hosts international visitors, distinguished faculty visitors, and visiting scholars from around the globe. The environmental program also conducts intensive, specialized environmental law trainings for U.S. judges, government agencies, and judges and lawyers around the world. The Environmental and Natural Resources Law for International Lawyers Summer Institute offers the opportunity to share this amazing program with those who wish to develop their expertise in environmental and natural resources law at one of the top ranked programs in the United States. The Institute also enables international lawyers to acquire a hands-on experience with U.S. law firms and businesses.

Portland, Oregon

Portland, Oregon, known as "the City of Roses," is situated approximately 70 miles from the Pacific Ocean and 50 miles from Mt. Hood in a magnificent setting between the sparkling waters of the Columbia and Willamette Rivers. Portland is known worldwide for its fantastic restaurants, parks, music, art galleries, museums and theatre companies. Also, Portland is just a short distance from Willamette valley wineries (world famous for pinot noir), skiing at Timberline Lodge and all of the excitement and beauty of Oregon's spectacular ocean beaches.
