

LLM Application Packet: 2020–21

Environmental, Natural Resources, and Energy Law

Summary of Program

The program leading to the master of laws (LLM) in environmental, natural resources, and energy law is for U.S. and international law school graduates who want to emphasize this area in practice, teaching, research, or public policy. The program is intended for both recent law school graduates and established lawyers who want to enhance their current practice or develop a new specialty.

Lewis & Clark's LLM program requires completion of 26 semester hours of credit for U.S. students and 28 hours for international students. All students participate in a 2-credit-hour LLM seminar in which students produce a paper and accompanying presentation on an environmental topic of their choice. U.S. students may also opt to complete a major written thesis.

The program can be completed in two semesters or spread over two and a half years. U.S. students can apply to begin their LLM studies in the fall semester (which generally begins in late August) or in the spring semester (which generally begins in mid-January). Absent unusual circumstances, we require international students to begin in mid-August in order to attend the Intro to U.S. Environmental Law Seminar, a 2-credit course designed to help prepare international students for law study in the United States.

Please consult our Environmental, Natural Resources, and Energy Law brochure or our website, go.lclark.edu/environmental/law, for a complete description of the LLM program, courses, and faculty. International students should also consult information for potential international LLM applicants, available on our website, for important information.

Note: Current Lewis & Clark Law School students interested in the joint JD/LLM degree should consult our student handbook, What's What, for details, as credit requirements differ from those above.

Admissions Criteria

Admission to the LLM program is highly competitive. Applicants must be graduates of a U.S. or international law school and must demonstrate an excellent academic record, strong legal research and writing skills, and an interest in environmental, natural resources, and energy law. Membership in the bar is not necessary for admission.

Each application is evaluated as a whole. We are interested in your scholarly capacity, your skills as a lawyer, your academic performance, and your interest in the environmental, natural resources, or energy law field.

We welcome applications from international law school graduates who wish to learn the major provisions of U.S. environmental law. However, the program is not suitable for students seeking an introduction to U.S. law or basic comparative law studies. The LLM alone is not designed to equip international students for U.S. practice or to take a U.S. bar exam. LLM students can expect extensive reading assignments, vigorous class discussion, and either a written examination or extensive research paper in each course. Superb English language skills are essential.

Costs and Financial Aid

Tuition for the 2019–20 academic year was $1,779 per credit, or $46,254 for 26 credits ($49,812 for 28 credits). The actual cost in any semester depends on the number of credits a student takes. In addition, a fee of $42.50 per semester plus $1,469.50* per semester for health insurance should be calculated into academic expenses, along with a book allowance of about $800 per semester. Students should also anticipate a budget of $10,000 for living expenses per semester. All tuition and fees are subject to change on an annual basis.

Federal financial aid (in the form of loans) is available to qualified U.S. students. International students are encouraged to explore funding options with their governments or private foundations. A limited number of tuition awards are available to outstanding U.S. and international students based on merit and need. To be considered for awards, students should include a letter with their application materials explaining their need for assistance.

If you plan to apply for federal financial aid, you should complete the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA), available at fafsa.ed.gov, as soon as possible. Because financial aid decisions may lag behind admission decisions, you should not wait until you have received an offer of admission to apply for financial aid.

*Rate may change in spring semester.

Application Deadlines

For U.S. students, applications for fall semester (August) admission are due March 15 each year; applications for spring semester (January) admission are due August 1 each year. For international students, applications for fall semester are due by February 15. However, we consider applications on a rolling basis and accept applications throughout the year. We will also consider applications past the admissions deadlines if there is still room in the class. (As noted above, we require international students to attend a summer institute to prepare them for law study in the United States, which begins in mid-August. For this reason, except in rare circumstances, we encourage all international applicants to begin in the fall semester.)

Application Instructions

To apply, please submit the following to the LLM program director (address on next page):

- Completed LLM application (attached), signed and dated.
- Nonrefundable $50 application fee.
- Letter explaining, in about 200 words, why you seek an LLM in environmental, natural resources, and energy law.
- Three letters of reference written by people who know you well. These letters should be written to help the Admissions Committee evaluate your academic capacity and ethical character, writing and research skills, and professional ability as a lawyer. The letters do not need to be sealed and may be submitted directly to the law school or with the other application materials. Letters for international applicants should discuss ability to study in a U.S. law school and facility with English, if known.
- Current resume or curriculum vitae.
- Writing sample of approximately 10–15 pages that will demonstrate your ability to organize, reason, and communicate. The sample need not be environmental in nature, but should be an example of legal writing that demonstrates your best writing, research, and analytical skills.
- Official transcripts from all law schools attended.
- International students only:
 - For students for whom English is a second language, a TOEFL score or other measure of facility with English (e.g., other tests of English or previous study in an English-speaking school). Our minimum scores are the following:
 - Internet-based TOEFL (IBT): 100
 - IELTS: 8
 - Certificate of financial responsibility.*
 - International student information sheet.*

*If you are admitted, we need these two forms to process your visa. Both forms are available from the admissions office or online at go.lclark.edu/lawfincert and go.lclark.edu/lawintappsup. All international students need these two forms.

Admission Process

Your admission file is created when the law school receives your completed application form and application fee. You may choose to submit all of your documents at once or to submit as many of the documents as you can at one time, with other items such as transcripts and reference letters, to follow. For U.S. students seeking loans, please submit and file financial aid forms as soon as possible; do not wait until you have received an offer of admission.

Once your file is complete, the Admissions Committee will review it and contact you regarding the decision. If you accept an offer of admission, you must submit a nonrefundable tuition deposit of $250 within three weeks after notification of admission to hold your place in the class.

Academic Calendar

The law school is on the semester system, with 13 weeks of classes and two weeks of exams in each semester. The fall semester generally begins the last week of August and ends the third or fourth week of December for a three-week winter break. The spring semester generally begins in mid-January and ends in early May, with a one-week spring break in March. The Intro to U.S. Environmental Law seminar begins in mid-August prior to the start of fall classes.
