

Lewis & Clark Law School's distance-learning Master of Studies in Environmental, Natural Resources, and Energy Law (MSL) offers students an opportunity to study environmental law and policy in a flexible, online format. Our environmental law program consistently receives high marks from graduates for its breadth, depth, and educational excellence.

The MSL graduate degree is for those who have a bachelor's degree and are interested in learning about environmental law and policy, but who do not wish to practice law or obtain a law degree.

All courses in the distance-learning MSL are:

- Offered 100% online in a flexible format.
- Engaging, and include online interactions with professors and classmates.
- Taught by many of the same professors who teach in our on campus law program.

With this degree, you will gain an excellent foundation in environmental, natural resources, and energy law. Our graduates have gone on to work in fulfilling roles including careers in wildlife conservation, environmental journalism, environmental non profits, and as legislative staff.

A few courses included in this program:

- Environmental Law
- Ocean & Coastal Law
- Natural Resources Law & Science
- Energy Law: Electricity Regulation
- Environmental Justice
- Water Law

Environmental Law Experts & Faculty

Lewis & Clark's environmental law faculty are leading the charge on issues such as climate change, endangered species, energy law and policy, and more. At Lewis & Clark Law School our students come first.

Highly-ranked environmental law program
by U.S. News & World Report

Scholarships are available

Network with students from around the country

Preparation for a rewarding career working on environmental issues