10 Reasons to choose Lewis & Clark Law School

01

You will LOVE where you live and study.

The appeal of Portland is no secret. Our beautiful and progressive city is near both mountains and the ocean—with abundant food, recreation, and entertainment options. And our campus is nestled in a forested park for a unique learning environment.

02

You get real-world training.

What is learning without hands-on, practical experience? All of our students pursue some combination of an externship, internship, paid clerkship, legal clinic position, pro bono work, law review, or moot court experience. We won't let you leave without it.

03

You will receive financial assistance.

We strive to make law school attainable for you. Our tuition is below the median of private law schools, and the vast majority of our entering students each year receive some sort of tuition relief in the form of scholarships or grants. Our loan repayment assistance and summer award programs for students interested in exploring public interest careers help them pay off or avoid student debt. Not to mention, all of our merit scholarships are free of academic terms for renewal, meaning you won't need to maintain a certain rank and GPA for your scholarship to renew each year.

04

You can go anywhere with your degree.

Our alumni practice everywhere from New York City to Washington, D.C., from Alaska to Hawai'i, from Florida to California, and points in between. They can also be found in more than 44 other countries around the world. Our dedicated Career Services team will help you narrow down what you want to do and where through personal attention starting your 1L year.

05

We will mentor you.

As soon as you begin school, we provide you with a personal Mentor Network based on your individual background and legal interests—a peer student mentor, a faculty mentor, and an alumni mentor. Your peer mentor can offer wisdom from having recently navigated 1L year, and your faculty mentor can provide academic guidance and help you plan for your career. Your alumni mentor will be a practicing attorney in the local legal community whose experience aligns with your short- or long-term goals.

06

Our professors are outstanding teachers who will know you by name.

Excellent teaching is a priority, and our students rave about their professors. Faculty are readily available for questions and conversation, mentoring, and advice on courses and careers. Personal and professional connections last long after law school graduation.

Our students are interesting and diverse.

Our students include business executives, biologists, policy makers, musicians, community activists, teachers, and health care professionals. While some are just out of college, others are embarking on a major career change. Most come from outside Oregon, and about 25 percent are students of color. Also, the atmosphere at L&C is friendly and cooperative. Students regard one another as colleagues and partners part of a lifelong network, not as competitors.

08

We give you options.

We offer the flexibility of part-time and full-time programs with day and evening courses. After your first-year courses, you can easily switch programs. This means you can graduate in as little as two-and-a-half years or stretch things out to more than the traditional three.

We offer global opportunities.

Even lawyers practicing exclusively in the United States encounter international matters in the course of their work today. That's why we offer a robust international law curriculum on campus, study abroad programs, and the ability to extern anywhere in the world. Students have gone to China, India, Australia, Kenya, Ghana, Costa Rica, Turkey, the Netherlands, and Germany in recent years.

We are a recognized national leader.

While rankings aren't everything, it's nice to be honored for your work. Lewis & Clark has been named a "best value" law school. Our legal writing, animal law, public interest law, environmental, natural resources, and energy law, and part-time programs have all received national or international accolades. And our moot court teams shine in competition.

Our outcomes speak for themselves.

FAFSA

The Free Application for Federal Student Aid is used to determine eligibility for federal financial aid. The bulk of federal financial aid for law students comes in the form of student loans. Remember these important details about the FAFSA:

Don't wait. To be considered for student loans, you must submit the FAFSA. Please apply by the priority deadline.

Don't worry. You do not need to finish your 2019 tax return before you submit the FAFSA. Income for the 2018 tax year will be reported, and we recommend using the IRS Data Retrieval Tool to transfer this information into your application. It's quick, easy, and accurate!

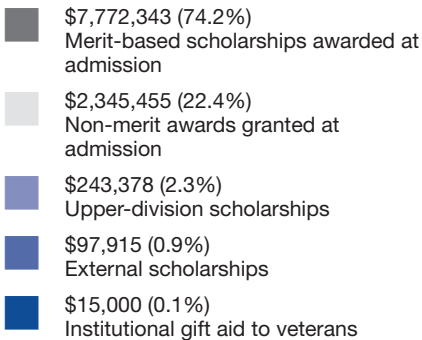

Read your Student Aid Report (SAR). You will receive your SAR after your FAFSA is processed. If there are any issues with your FAFSA, you will be given further instructions.

Follow through as soon as possible. If we need any additional information, we will be in touch. Please reply as quickly as you can. A delay on your part may delay your offer of financial assistance.

In the 2018–19 school year, Lewis & Clark law students received $10,474,091 in scholarships.

The law school's Office of Career Services posts job listings for students and can assist you with locating clerkships, work-study opportunities, externships, pro bono experiences, and public interest stipends for summer work.

Student Loans

Most law students find loan programs to be useful resources for financing their legal education. These funds allow students to borrow against their future earning potential, which research indicates improves with advanced educational attainment. The FAFSA must be filed each year to access the federal student loan programs. The average student loan amount for Lewis & Clark Law School JD students who graduated in the 2018–19 year and borrowed loans was approximately $136,500.

In the 2018–19 school year, Lewis & Clark law students received $19,548,916 in loans from the following sources:

Private Student Loans

Private loans tend to be some of the most expensive sources of funding, so students should carefully consider all federal borrowing options before turning to a private loan. Private loans, which are offered by a variety of lending institutions, are typically unsubsidized. No FAFSA is required. Approval is based on a review of the borrower's credit history and credit score. The eligibility criteria, interest rates, fee structures, and repayment terms of private loans vary greatly from lender to lender.

Bar Study Loans

Bar study loans are credit-qualified private loans intended to help cover expenses incurred after graduation while a student prepares for the bar exam. Review information on lender websites for details on the loan programs. Please note that some lenders require a previous borrowing relationship to qualify for the bar study loan.

Loan Repayment

Lewis & Clark Law School Loan Repayment Assistance Program (LRAP)

Our LRAP helps JD graduates take the public interest jobs they desire without worrying about how to make their monthly payments on law school loans. There is no set cap on the amount of assistance an individual graduate can receive, and we regularly help with up to 100 percent of law school loan repayment obligations over a three- to five-year period depending on funds available.

State Bar Association Repayment Programs

The bar associations in many states also offer loan repayment assistance to new attorneys working in public interest organizations or qualified government agencies. Contact the bar association in the state where you wish to practice law to inquire about assistance, qualifications, and their application process.

Federal Student Loan Repayment Options

A variety of repayment plans are available to borrowers. Under debt-driven plans, the monthly payment amount is calculated based on total debt, interest rate, and length of repayment period. Under income-driven plans, the monthly payment amount is calculated as a percentage of your discretionary income. Learn more about repayment options at studentaid.gov/repay. Those who plan to work in the public interest should also explore the Public Service Loan Forgiveness program.

Cost

Lewis & Clark Law School is a private school, so tuition is the same for all students regardless of state of residency.

|--|----------|
| Living, transportation, and personal expenses (maximum allowable). . | $25,200 |
| Books and supplies (estimated). | $1,600 |

Living expenses vary depending on each student's own personal needs and circumstances. There are many ways to reduce these costs while in law school, such as sharing housing and using alternative transportation. Keep in mind that Oregon has no sales tax, so make some of your planned law school purchases after you relocate to Portland. Visit go.lclark.edu/living-expenses to see three sample 9-month budgets for living expenses. We also recommend that you review the Money Management section of the Financial Aid website at go.lclark.edu/money_management.

Student borrowers should be aware that federal student loans are subject to origination fees. The fees are calculated as a percentage of the total loan amount and deducted from each loan disbursement. See page 6 for the percentages.

Billing and Payment

The Office of Student and Departmental Account Services divides annual charges in half and bills your student account before each semester. An online account statement will be provided when your account is billed. Our students have a variety of choices when settling their accounts:

- Pay the balance due in full
- Apply financial aid, including federal student loans
- Enroll in a monthly payment plan with Nelnet: Tuition Management Systems (TMS) at lclark.afford.com

*Cost of student health insurance will be determined before the start of the Fall 2020 semester.

†Summer school courses are 2 to 3 credits. In addition, students can undertake summer externships that range from 3 to 12 credits. Many students take one or two courses over one summer. Students taking two summer school classes may become eligible to graduate early or to take part-time semesters and still graduate in three years in the full-time program.

Tips for Comparing Financial Aid Packages

When making financial aid package comparisons, remember to consider the following criteria to accurately compare the net costs for your attendance at each school:

- Estimated living expenses. Does the school use an average cost-of-living rate, or the lowest rate recommended? Make sure to use the same comparative factor. (Lewis & Clark uses the average.)
- Scholarship terms. Is the scholarship renewable? Do you need to have a minimum GPA to keep your award? How many students lose their scholarships?
- Tuition calculation. Is tuition charged per year, per semester, or per credit? If tuition is charged per credit, how many credits are required to graduate?
- Fees. Does the school charge fees beyond tuition, and is it clear what those fees are?
